60% of a child's brain develops by the age of six.

Yes, that's correct! The early years of a child's life are crucial for brain development. Research suggests that about 60% of a child's brain develops by the age of six. During this time, children experience rapid cognitive, emotional, and social growth, which lays the foundation for their future learning and behavior. This underscores the importance of providing nurturing environments, positive experiences, and stimulating activities for young children to support their optimal development.
